Hoverboards Banned from GSU Campus

Many of you are aware of recent news reports regarding serious safety concerns across the United States involving self-balancing personal scooters, or "hoverboards." There have been numerous cases where certain makes and models of these devices have caused fires and property damage.

At this time the Consumer Product Safety Commission is investigating ten of these cases. They have yet to issue any formal report and recommendation. However, most major airlines have banned them from being taken on flights and many higher education institutions across the country have banned these devices from being used on campus and or within residence halls.

In light of the potential fire hazard issues with hoverboards, the University has made a decision to immediately BAN them from the GSU campus until they have been deemed to no longer be a fire/safety hazard.

Please know that you will not be able to have it on campus and if it is found, it will be confiscated.

Nursing Honor Society Earns Two Awards

Lambda Lambda, GSU's local chapter of Sigma Theta Tau International (STTI) – the Honor Society of Nursing – recently received two awards from STTI. At the organization's biennial convention held in November in Las Vegas, the group won the Chapter Key Award. The award honors chapters that excel in activities such as membership recruitment and retention; publicity and programming; professional and leadership develop; and local, national and international collaboration. "This is a prestigious award for any STTI local chapter," said Nancy MacMullen, Chair of the Department of Nursing at GSU.

In September, the GSU chapter won the Regional Showcase of Excellence Award, which acknowledges the efforts of local and regional chapters. Lambda Lambda was recognized for the transformative growth of the local chapter. "I can't think of a nicer present to receive from STTI during our 25th anniversary year," said Shirley Comer, University Lecturer in the Department of Nursing and Lambda Lambda President.
